

David G. Schwartz

dgschwartz.com

Brief Biography

 dgs@unlv.nevada.edu

 702.895.2242

 @drdave702

 davidgswartz

 dgswriter.com

 DoctorDave702

 Forbes site

 Amazon bookstore

 Full Curriculum Vitae

David G. Schwartz, the Director of the Center for Gaming Research and instructor at the University of Nevada, Las Vegas, studies gambling and casinos, Las Vegas, tourism, and games. He is also a Forbes contributor and a noted speaker.

Schwartz has written several books, including Grandissimo: The First Emperor of Las Vegas, Roll the Bones: The History of Gambling, and Boardwalk Playground: The Making, Unmaking, & Remaking of Atlantic City. He has been extensively quoted in the media and featured in television programs.

Born in Atlantic City, New Jersey, Schwartz earned his bachelor's degree (a double major in anthropology and history) as well as his master's degree from the University of Pennsylvania before receiving his doctorate in US History from UCLA. His academic interest in gambling stems from his hands-on experience in the casino industry as a security officer, surveillance officer, and Mr. Peanut.

